sion. Among the distinguished guests It is customary for The Northwest Viking to be reduced by one column for the issues of each summer quarter, leaving it a six instead of who were present were Governor seven column sheet. This week, which marks the final issue of the spring and Mrs. John R. Rogers and State quarter, finds The Viking down to six columns. Things are slack, Superintendent of Schools Frank J. Browne. A short informal program news is hard to get, students are busy with exams, and the paper is appearing three days ahead of schedule to catch the Freshmen before they was presented and refreshments leave for home.

Or maybe it is coming out short columned on account of the fact that the warm weather has rushed the summer season to a certain extent.

WE ADVISE, TEN

There are over two hundred students finishing up this quarter tomorrow with the certified right to go out and accept jobs to teach youngsters in grade schools. They have had a taste of this work already in their practice teaching and yet there will be problems that will have to be met face to face, placing a responsibility on these people when they receive that diploma tomorrow morning.

There are those that have proved themselves fully qualified to go out and take their first school, or school room, as it may be. Others do not umns: "Bicyclers, Take Note!" appear quite as ready for the task as some of their fellow students, while "Sarah came into our store, still others, though we are not authorities on actual teaching fitness, are Ordered soda-liked itprobably incapable of standing any strong headwinds in their flimsy built crafts.

We do not draw our blunt cross-grain of this class, any class for that matter, for they are all divided between the excellent and the poor, by their actual ability to get grades or not to get them, but considerably on their faculties to harmonize with colleagues, strangers, enemies, or varied and new matters that present themselves daily.

We are not throwing out innuendoes, nor attempting to "rub" any of those that we have so generally classed in the above part of the article, nor are we thinking of any one person.

We do feel that we have a bit of advice that all will agree is logical and a bit that many can well afford to look themselves over carefully for mal school. and then inject it into the system if lacking, and if there to still bring in to bear weight-COUNT TO TEN BEFORE ACTING.

Don't forget that there will be that student banked upon to make an absolute failure of his first year's work, that will get down and take himself seriously enough to use his energies intelligently and will do a real good job. work.

We sincerely hope that all those graduating tomorrow will be able to land positions before the school year starts next fall. It is a calamity for them to spend two years or more in preparing themselves for such work and then be unable to get employment. Many have borrowed money that must be paid back and have gone through all that study with the hopes and worries connected with the necessity of getting work. Times are hard, competition strong, nothing can be done to alter the layout at the present, but we can all hope for the better and not become too pessimistic and lay down our endeavors as hopeless.

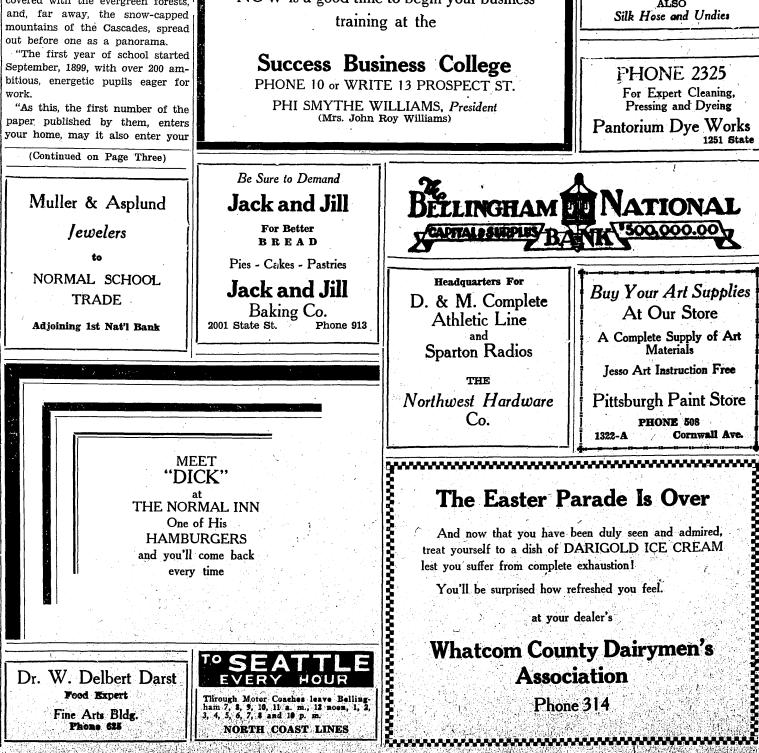

We have attempted to serve all under this regime of the paper during the past three quarters with a sheet that is a worthy organ of the school and one that has the best standards obtainable for the situation to be met with each issue. We have made friends and enemies-we expect that in the position we are in. We have listened-sometimes not patientlyto harsh and destructive criticisms, and we have been pleased and honored with handshakes for attributed good work.

Modesty is nice, but "he who tooteth not his own horn the same thereof shall not be tooted." Consequently we are not committing error in our own minds by informing the students and faculty that we think we have given them a paper that is worthy of the place accorded in the school. We brought the school a first place from a national paper judging contest that had widespread competition, open to any. We have brought it news never given to the students previously until the following week. We have kept it to many high levels in departments that have been set for us by our predecessors. We have erred several times and have been willing to admit it and do everything in our power to smooth things over so that no harm would come to the school or the individual from it, while we also feel that we have received several knocks and slams entirely unjust and not due us.

Through it all we have enjoyed ourselves and feel that the ultimate result is many friends worth having, and we wish to thank all those that have co-operated with us-impossible to do it alone.

We hate to see many of the traditions started with the forming of the present graduating class into a freshman class, shattered, so we hand out our goodbye and best wishes now and don't forget-COUNT TO TEN AND THEN USE "THE OL' BEAN."

We read where a California judge rules that anyone seeing liquor in a friend's house and failing to report it, is likewise a law-breaker. Whether the situation is on the prohibition question or not, it will be a hard world to get along in if everyone is "cutting the throat" of his neighbor. Revenge will reign supreme.

About the only three things still noted to be ever the same through this third of a century are that the Messenger was printed by the same printing firm which now prints the Northwest Viking, the firm of Miller & Sutherlen, once the Irish Printing Company, and listed there as Irish & Edson-all, in all, the same institution. Number two is the fact that Ella Higginson, nationally known writer and contributor to the first issue and to many more, was then as now living directly across from the Normal.

The third similarity was the Friday morning assemblies which were in vogue from the very first. Dr. E. T. Mathes, the first president, saw to it that the faculty supplied the programs by delivering lectures on their pet subjects. By contrast there appears to be no lessening of quality in these programs through the years. Some of the old profs used the following as subjects for their discourses: "Ventilation," "Bacteria and Disease," "The Register," "Duties of the Teacher," "Home Work," etc. Dr. E. T. Mathes lives in Bellingham today and enjoys a retired but active life.

Spelling was a requirement for all students in those days. The curriculum was quite varied and even technique was given and also required. The training school, having seventy-five pupils, was called the "model school." The school had six literary clubs and a basketball team from the start, with the only sport

Dr. Fyfe admits, however, that "it would be a waste of words to deplore at length the excessive demands of dancing upon the time of some students." Athletic students are better students than those who spend their spare time dancing, he declares.

In closing this column for the last issue of this quarter we think it would be entirely fitting to make a brief survey of the past three quarter's athletic ventures.

Last autumn Coach Carver's gridiron men, playing extraordinarily strong teams, did not fare quite so good as far as wins were concerned. They downed the U.S Coast Guard, Centralia Junior College, and tied a strong College of Puget Sound machine. They dropped games to Cheney, Ellensburg, Oregon State Normal and St. Martins.

Library Fair Sized

It is possible that there are a few of the original 1,420 books still in the library, showing that it, too, had a good rooting. There are probably over a hundred of the upper classmen today who remember the old library and particularly its setting, the entrance being where the present dean of women's office

Sandwiched in the column of general notes is found this: "Lost-A small notebook containing a love letter. Finder please return book without reading letter to Miss S. P." In going over the first Klipsun, which was really an enlarged volume of The Normal Messenger of the same name, dated June, 1900, we find as a frontispiece the picture of the school's first graduating class. a group of eight young ladies. The seven members of the faculty were given profuse write-ups along with the respective photographs. Records of the doings of the various societies and clubs are all in this first volume, but nothing about athletics. It announced the first summer school for that season of 1900 which would give county certificates in physics, algebra, and English history. The remainder of the book was filled with poetry and advertising of uncertain meter.

One Tradition Still

The colors, blue and white, traditional to Bellingham Normal were the same from the beginning. The cover of the first issue of the Normal Messenger was printed in these colors. There has been no other tradition following on through the three decades that can be traced. songs, clubs, and other forms of Normal activity and tradition were much changed, and there are no evidences of similarity in contrast with those of today.
