

LAYMEN SCHOOL GROUP FORMED

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Aroused by the continuing nationwide crisis in the public schools, a group of prominent men and women have formed a National Citizen's Commission for the Public Schools which will work for concerted action by citizens in their local communities, it was announced here today.

The Commission has received initial financial support from the Carnegie Corporation and the General Education Board.

Dr. James B. Conant, President of Harvard University, hailed it as "potentially the most important move for the advancement of public education taken in the last fifty years."

The commission is composed exclusively of laymen, many of them outstanding in business, labor, law and publishing. Its members are convinced that because of the grave challenges America faces in today's world the prime need of this country is a wise and informed citizenry. For this reason they feel that the public schools have never before been so important to the nation and that there is a special urgency in the problems of the public schools today.

The members of the new commission point to the lack of clarity in educational goals, the shortage of trained teachers, overcrowded classrooms and the serious inequalities of educational opportunity for children in many parts of the country as only a few of the public school problems which should be of direct concern to us all.

The commission is the first independent national association of laymen dedicated to the improvement of the public schools established in this century, and as it gathers sufficient information and knowledge will act as a clearing house of information on public school problems for local groups throughout the country. The commission plans to cite outstanding examples of community action for the improvement of public schools.

Roy E. Larsen, president of Time Inc., is chairman of the commission. Its other officers are: James F. Brownlee, former Deputy Administrator of the OPA, vice chairman; John A. Stevenson, president of Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., treasurer; and Leo Perlis, Director of the National CIO Community Services Committee, secretary. The initial membership, which will eventually total 60, includes 28 people from many sections of the nation.

"No one can examine the problems facing our nation today without realizing that public education is more important now than ever before in our history," Mr. Larsen said in announcing the commission.

"More than nine million adults have completed less than five years of school, but what is even worse, uncounted millions of our children are today being handicapped by grossly inadequate schooling.

"Professional educators, many conscientious school boards, the Parent-Teacher associations, and other groups are working hard for better public schools. But the problems of public education are so broad that they concern all of us, and it is time for all of us to do something about them.

"Good public schools require money. But we might as well face the fact that we can't buy our way out of this situation just with money. Regardless of the amount of Federal or State aid granted, citizens in every community must shoulder the responsibility for their public schools and must provide the thought and energy to insure that the public schools do their job.

"Our group starts from scratch. We begin our voluntary effort with deep appreciation of our own lack of knowledge of the varying problems and conditions in the public schools in different communities. In trying to help others, we will need the enthusiastic cooperation of all interested citizens.

"As soon as we gather sufficient information and knowledge, the commission will act as a clearing house to enable one group of laymen working for better public schools to benefit from the experience of others," Mr. Larsen said. "While we recognize that the situations in no two communities can ever be exactly alike, and no pat solution can be offered to any, we have no doubt that community efforts now being carried on in isolation would benefit immeasurably from the continuing encouragement which the union of forces and common goals can provide.

"As things are now, many of us do not know what to expect of our public schools. Some of us do not know whether the ones we have are good or bad. Many school boards are in a position where they must first find out how much they can spend, and then decide what the quality of education offered in their public schools will be. We believe this process is in reverse. We must all decide what results we want from our public schools, and then we must begin at once to take the necessary steps to obtain them."

With regard to the major problem of recruiting and preparing enough teachers of the proper caliber for the public schools, Mr. Larsen said, "Too many of us have been lulled into a false feeling that the teacher problem has been taken care of by recent increases in teachers' salaries. Nothing could be further from the truth."

The commission's program calls for the citation of groups of laymen who have made exceptional progress in improving their local public schools. Later, outstanding achievements of good public schools may be chosen for public citation.

The commission will expand its present membership to sixty persons of varied experience from every region of the nation. Members must be citizens of the United States, and not professionally identified with education, religion or politics. The commission's staff will include a full-time educational consultant, assisted by an advisory board of educators.

Mr. Larsen emphasized that the 28 persons who form the nucleus membership of the commission are so convinced of the urgency and importance of the work of the new organization that they are going to give "first priority" to it. Besides the commission's officers, these members are: Mrs. Barry Bingham, vice president, Louisville (Ky.) (Continued on Page 4)

The reasoning (?) behind this rate increase is too complicated for the layman to follow but the experts who control the rails point out that once the law of "supply and demand" is broken dear old Uncle Sam kicks through. Sounds funny but it works.

NEA Approves Commission

All persons in any way concerned about the welfare of our public schools should be interested in the creation of a National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools last month. This commission, financed by the Carnegie Foundation and the General Education board, is composed entirely of laymen whose purpose is to advance public education.

The organization seems to be the answer to a definite need on the part of the public school system. Perhaps, through the work of this commission, education might cease to be a skeleton in the American closet and take its rightful place as one of our most important endeavors. Perhaps the public may be made to realize that education is a good investment; may be made to realize the awful significance of the fact that more money is being spent for alcohol and tobacco than for our schools.

This commission does not present itself as being able to solve the many school problems by itself. However, it does indicate the sincere concern of its members in matters pertaining to the training of young citizens. Of the commission Charles Dollard, President of the Carnegie Foundation, writes, "The creation of the National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools is heartening evidence of America's concern for the maintenance of a healthy democratic society. Democracy and education are inseparable allies and it is vain to assume that this country can continue to grow and prosper without a sound public school system. The franchise is a dangerous weapon in the hands of the ill-informed and poorly educated."

Dollard further states: "The fundamental strength of the American public school system has been the tradition of local responsibility for local schools. In this connection, it is reassuring to note that the commission has no prefabricated program which it seeks to impose on America's schools but will confine itself to discovering, describing and generalizing sound and progressive developments in primary and secondary education throughout the country."

Those who may be apprehensive about this commission as a possible stumbling block to educators, should have no fear along this line. The purpose of the organization was stated by its president, Roy E. Larsen, President of Time, Incorporated, who wrote, "We are established as a national commission, not because we think there is any national solution to the problems confronting our public schools. On the contrary, we believe that what happens in and to our public schools is primarily a community problem. We start our studies of the school with the prejudice that the best schools in any area will be found where the local citizens have made the schools a top concern. As one of our earliest public actions, we hope to cite instances of successful community action for the improvement of the schools. In the process of arriving at such citations we hope to assemble many case histories of community action which we can analyze and pass along to help other community groups who want to go into action."

The idea for this commission was originally suggested by a group of leading educators who felt that real improvement in the public school situation could not come without citizen understanding, planning and action. The group has the approval of the National Education Association. Therefore, with its very creditable aims and purpose, the organization seems to be very much worthy of support on the part of all teachers.

The commission would appreciate any information on effective community activity being taken on behalf of the schools. For further details on this commission, refer to the news story also printed this week.

Coffee Price May be Raised

Unless students refrain from leaving bottles and coffee cups on the tables in the Student Lounge, it may be necessary to raise the price of coffee. This may sound like a ridiculous statement but it's the truth.

When the coffee bar was opened the price of coffee was set at five cents with the understanding that students were to return cups to the counter. The students during the year cooperated but the situation has become serious.

If additional help must be taken on to cope with this situation, there is no alternative but to raise the price of coffee to take care of the additional overhead. Let's return those coffee cups to the counter and the bottles to the racks.

College Christian Fellowship Meets

Election of officers and the selection of meeting days were the important events in a series of College Christian Fellowship meetings held last Friday through Tuesday. Einar Rahm, a past president of the group, was elected summer quarter chairman, while Betty Byrd was elected treasurer. Other officers chosen were either hold overs from last year's officers, or elected for next year by the regular group.

It was decided to hold meetings Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Monday is to be a missionary or devotional meeting, Wednesday a Bible study in the book of Philippians, while Thursday will be a very informal meeting, and will include singing, testimonies, speakers, and perhaps the group eating together.

Monday's meeting will be headed by Vivian Gunderson, Ferndale elementary school teacher. Al Magnuson, Bible study chairman during most of last year will serve in the same capacity this summer. Patricia Baker will be in charge of the Thursday meetings, having been chairman of the groups sings throughout the past year.

Meetings are at 12:30 in room 303 with all students invited to attend.

Reception Held

George Hopkins, pianist, attended a reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Hicks after the assembly program in the college auditorium last Tuesday evening.

The pianist is from Eugene, Oregon, and has performed with the Portland Symphony orchestra.

Teachers Must Study Longer

Washington school teachers, beginning in September of 1951, will be required to have five years of college training and one to four years of teacher experience to qualify for a general teaching certificate, it was announced yesterday.

"Washington's teachers will be the best trained in the nation under the new program," Mrs. Pearl A. Wana-maker said.

The new plan is to qualify teachers for a lifetime teaching certificate. Teachers will have the certificate by September, 1951, if they qualify.

The new program, established by the state board of education, contemplates teachers will get a one-year teaching certificate after four years of college. This may be renewed annually for four years by attendance at summer school. At the end of this time the lifetime certificate will be issued.

Teachers may also teach a year and return to college for their fifth year of college to qualify for the certificate. The program does not now provide that teachers would take five straight years of college training and then obtain the necessary experience.

The general certificate will permit teachers to teach in either high school or grade school. No grade or high school certificates will be

Board Discusses Lake Conditions

Lakewood was the main topic of discussion at the Board of Control meeting Wednesday, June 30. A five-member committee was appointed to investigate conditions at the college lake property and to make suggestions for improvement of these conditions.

The board discussed the many things to be repaired at the lake. These things included the boat house, which is badly in need of repair; volley ball courts, which need clearing of weeds; outside cookstoves; locks on buildings; bath house; and many others.

The board will act on this matter at their next meeting when the committee will have its report of survey.

The Collegian printing contract for the coming year was also discussed thoroughly by the board. No action was taken and will not be taken until more detailed information has been received from the various printing companies.

Under the new plan all public and private colleges may train teachers for the general certificate.

Popular Western Coed Wed In Lovely June Ceremony

Dolores York and Lauren S. Brown were married Saturday evening, June 18, at the Arlington Methodist church. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold York of Darrington and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Brown of Mt. Vernon.

Miss York was gowned in white slipped satin with a collar embroidered with crystal beads and seed pearls. The dress had a fitted bodice, full skirt and a long train. The lace-edged veil was held by a tiara of beads and seed pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of stephanotis centered with a white orchid. Her jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift of the groom.

Bridesmaids were dressed alike in white taffeta. They carried colonial bouquets of white Esther Reed daisies. The bridesmaids were Mary Ellen Van Winkle of Everett, Dorothy Dahl of Burlington and Mrs. Cecil Hannon of Bellingham.

Mrs. Harold Richter, matron of honor, was gowned exactly like the bridesmaids and her bouquet was identical to theirs.

The flower girl was Miss York's niece, Patty Nold of Arlington and her two year old brother, Timmy Nold was the ringbearer.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Clifford Knudson played the organ and Bud Peterson sang "I Love You Truly" and "Because." During the service he sang the "Lord's Prayer."

Captain William Brown, United States Army, was best man for his only brother. Ushers were Dale Shuler, Ted Shuler, both of Rockport, William Kearns of Bellingham and Eugene Entricken of Burlington.

In the theme of an all-white wedding, the men of the party all wore white jackets. The church was decorated with white gladiolus, white snapdragons and white stock. White tapers at all the windows and along the aisle, as well as in four candlebra made a beautiful setting for the candlelight service.

After the reception in the church parlors, the couple left for a honeymoon at a lake cottage. For going away the new Mrs. Brown wore an oyster white suit with navy blue accessories and wore the orchid from her bouquet. Her jewelry was hand-wrought Mexican silver, a gift of her father.

At the serving tables the bridesmaids and matron of honor presided. The center table held the wedding cake, in the shape of a maltese cross. Also assisting were Sharon Anderson of Stanwood at the gift table, Caroline Robinson of Lynden, Barbara Hodges and Kathleen Loughnan. Charlotet Ellis presided at the punch bowl and Dixie and Delores Dodds had the guest book.

Mrs. Brown attended Western Washington College of Education at Bellingham, where she was a drum majorette in the Viking band and 1948 Homecoming queen. Mr. Brown also attended Western and plans to continue his education at Washington State College at Pullman. The young couple will be at home to their friends at LaConner.

Fourth of July Skiing Peculiar to Mount Baker

The Heather Cup Ski races are considered by tourists to be tops on their list of sightseeing tours. The races are unusual because they take place in the summer time. In most of the United States skiing may be done only in the winter months. Skiing on the Fourth of July draws many hundreds of visitors from all over the country. The races are worth seeing. Some of the best skiers in the country will perform there, Sunday.

Accomplished Skier Perform At Heather Cup Ski Races

Students will board a bus Sunday, July 3, and travel to Mount Baker to the Heather Cup Ski races. They will have the opportunity to watch some of the best skiers in the country perform.

The bus will follow the highway through Whatcom county into the Mount Baker region and will stop at the lodge. The ski races will be the main event of the trip but there will be time for students to take short walks about the country and take pictures.

Mount Baker is one of the few regions where one may watch skiing on the Fourth of July. Thousands of visitors come to the Northwest to witness skiing in the summer months.

The trip to the Heather ski races will take a full day.

Bill McDonald was unanimously appointed Mayor of Chuckanut Mountain in the unceremonious ceremony performed as raindrops assisted in putting out our campfire and thinning our coffee.

A leaden sky, broken only by flash bulbs, prevented a "clear" view of Mount Baker and the San Juan islands.

Don Packard, our silver-voiced falsetto, led the group in many of the 'chestnuts,' while camera fans, including Mr. Rice, Bernie Lepeska, and myself, discussed the values of fine-grain developing when using dishwater as a developer.

Mr. Irish pointed out several landmarks to the 33 hikers. Descent was completed by 3:30 p. m. and the bus and private cars conveyed the hikers to the college.

Voyageurs Enjoy Mail Boat Cruise

Sixty students embarked on the Osage last Saturday morning for a trip through the islands of Puget Sound. According to reports everyone had a pleasant journey with no mishaps.

The cruise followed the regular route of the Osage which is a mail and freight boat. The Yodeler, recreational bulletin, had this to say about the trip, "Though no sea serpents were sighted, and the party suffered little from sunburn, it was an interesting trip according to many of the group."

Hundred Mile San Juan Island Cruise Planned for Independence Week-End

Over the holiday week-end, July 2-4, students will make a hundred mile cruise through the San Juan islands. Two boats will be used, the Sea Hawk and the Xenial. The two boats will stop to give their passengers a vantage view point of some of the activities of the International Yachting races. Stops also will be made on Orcas island, Blakely, San Juan, Lopez, Rosario and other points of interest.

The summer recreation bulletin describes the trip as follows: "The 172 islands of the San Juan group present fascinatingly beautiful scenery in their rugged coasts, wooded slopes, hidden bays, narrow inlets and views of distant mountain peaks. Cruising among these islands overnight camp is made at a state park or in a sheltered cove. On Orcas island the trail to the top of Mount Constitution provides an interesting hike, following the shore of beautiful Mountain Lake and climbing to the tower of the summit."

Sleeping bags may be rented from the physical education department.
